The rates of diffusion of miconazole and econazole through rat skin were determined and the results were discussed in relation to the clinical efficacy of miconazole. The concentration of drug in the donor phase was varied between 0.5 and 100 micrograms/ml and the drug diffusion was investigated for periods of 8-36 h. Miconazole diffuses more slowly than econazole, the apparent permeability coefficient (Papp) being 8 x 10⁻⁹ cm²/h for miconazole and 6 x 10⁻⁹ cm²/h for econazole. The Papp values were independent of the initial concentration of drug in the donor and were only weakly dependent on the lag time. The relative permeability values for miconazole (resembling the partition coefficient of miconazole in octanol) were 1.5-2.2 and for econazole 2.9-3.1, the latter value corresponding to the average intrinsic skin permeability of econazole. The relative permeability of miconazole was higher than that of econazole and the data indicate that in spite of the higher permeability of econazole its clinical efficacy is probably not greater than that of miconazole. Peer-to-Peer Tax Clearing of the European Union On 6 December 2017, the European Commission published an Action Plan 2016-2019 on Peering and Taxation.
